

Abstract

The invention is a device and method of fabrication where an array of electrostatically activated members of (e.g., movable mirrors) formed in a layer comprising silicon is mounted over a ceramic substrate. The substrate includes 5 conductors formed on a major surface and in via holes formed in the substrate. The conductors are positioned so as to selectively operate the array of mirrors.